We used EwE-F, a Fortran version of Ecosim, to implement a two-way coupling between a food web model and a biogeochemical model of the Baltic Sea.

Two-way coupling between Ecosim (EwE-F) and a biogeochemical model of the Baltic Sea

Bärbel Müller-Karulis¹, Ekin Akoglu², Maciej T. Tomczak¹, Bo Gustafsson¹

¹Stockholm University, Baltic Nest Institute, Baltic Sea Centre, SE-106 91, Stockholm, Sweden
²Middle East Technical University, Institute of Marine Sciences, P.O. Box 28, 33731, Erdemli, Turkey

Acknowledgement:
This work resulted from the BONUS Bluewebs project and the EU Horizon 2020 research and innovation project ClimeFish. BONUS Bluewebs has received funding from BONUS (Art 185), funded jointly by the EU and FORMAS. The Baltic Nest Institute is supported by the Swedish Agency for Marine and Water Management through their grant 1:11 - Measures for marine and water environment.